The Publisher proposes to re-print by subscription, The surprising, yet real and true voyages and adventures of Mons. PIERRE VAUD, a native of Bourdeaux, and Capt. of a ship. Translated from the French by Mrs. G. Smith, author of Henry and Frances.

Virg.

Per varios casus, per tot discrimina rerum.

Thru' various accidents and many dangerous adventures.

This useful and entertaining Pamphlet will contain about eleven pages octavo; the price to subscribers shall not exceed 5s. handsomely bound in sheep, or 3s. 6d. stitched in blue paper; and a seventh gratis to those who sign for six books. When three hundred are subscribed for, which will barely defray the expence of the work, it will be immediately put to the press, and finished with the utmost dispatch; which it is supposed may be procured in a few weeks, as some copies are already engaged. — Subscriptions are gratefully received by E. RUSSELL, the Publisher, at his Printing-Office in Essex-Street, near Liberty-Stamp; also by J. WHITE next the Swan-Tavern, South-End; N. COVERLY, in Newbury-Street; and by all those Gentlemen who are desirous of promoting polite literature in the different states, with whom subscription-papers are lodged.

An ENIGMA for the LADIES.

MORE constant than the turtle dove,
More beauteous than the Girl I love,
More tawdry than the dress of beaux,
More fickle than the wind that blows,
What Blakeney fear'd amidst proud war,
What strikes with dread the honest tar,
What brave Byng did to save Mahon,
What Ladies, you can call your own,
What charms me more than Woman's eyes,
What you esteem above a Man,
What's sweeter than a mutual kiss,
Will instantly unriddle this.

SECRET for recovering the WRITING upon PARCHMENT decayed by time, and of making it legible.

DIP the parchment obliterated by time into a vessel of cold water, fresh drawn from the well: In about a minute take it out, and press it between two papers, to prevent its crumbling up in drying. As soon as it is moderately dry, if it be not then legible repeat the operation two or three times. The skin will then resume its pristine color, and will appear all alike.

AY 20 3634. 1783

An old PORTUGUESE ANECDOTE.

PEDRO I. 8th King of Portugal, distinguished his reign by a steady and impartial administration of justice, by which he rendered his people no less happy than himself. The following instance of his equity and inflexibility is very remarkable.

An Ecclesiastic, in a great passion, killed a Mason whom he had employed, for not executing something agreeable to his mind. The King dissembled his knowledge of the crime, and left it to the cognizance of the proper courts, where the issue of the business was, that the Priest was suspended from saying mass for a year. At this slight punishment the family of the deceased was highly offended. The King caused it to be hinted to the Mason's son that he should kill the Priest: He did so, and falling into the hands of justice, was condemned to suffer death; but as no capital sentence could be executed without the King's consent, this was laid before him among the rest: Upon which he asked, "What was the young man's trade?" It was answered, "That he followed his father's." Then, said the King, "I shall commute his punishment, by restraining him from meddling with stone and mortar for a twelve-month." After this affair he punished capital crimes in the Clergy, with death; and when they desired that his Majesty would be pleased to refer their causes to a superior tribunal, he answered very calmly, "This is what I mean to do, for I send them to the highest of all tribunals, to that of their Maker and mine."

A METHOD to avoid VICE, and secure VIRTUE.

IF you would be free from sin, fly temptation; he that does not endeavor to avoid the one, cannot expect Providence to defend him from the other. If the first sparks of ill were quenched, there would be no flame; for how can he kill, who dares not be angry; or be an adulterer in act, that does not transgress in desire? How can he be perjured, that fears an oath; or be defrauded, that does not allow himself to cover?

The DIFFERENT EFFECTS of LOVE.

NOTHING shews the dignity of love more, than that it has all the other passions in avowed subordination to it; anger, pity, hope and terror are all its servants and dependents: It soothes or inflames us at pleasure, and we are gay and gloomy, just as the little blind Boy would have us: How many shapes does he wear? Nothing is more solemn, nothing more whimsical! He makes the mad man grave, and the sober man mad: He brings pride and ambition to humility and their knees; and the miser, when love has once warmed his frozen heart, unclenches both his fists and throws away his money in handfuls. Love is a thing which all people feel, most people talk of, and what but few understand.

NO man can be happy in idleness; he that should be condemned to lie torpid and motionless, "would try for recreation (says South) to the mines and galleys;" and it is well when nature or fortune find employment for those who would not have known how to procure it for themselves.

He whose mind is engaged by the acquisition or improvement of a fortune, not only escapes the insipidity of indifference, and the tediousness of inactivity, but gains enjoyments wholly unknown to those who live lazily on the toil of others; for life affords no higher pleasure, than that of surmounting difficulties, passing from one step of success to another, framing new wishes, and seeing them gratified. He that labors in any great or laudable undertaking, has his fatigues first supported by hope, and afterwards rewarded by joy; he is always moving towards a certain end, and when he has attained it, an end more distant invites him to a new pursuit; for, to strive with difficulties, and to conquer them, is the highest human felicity; the next is to strive, and deserve to conquer.

MORAL SENTIMENTS of the ANCIENTS; on PROSPERITY, ADVERSITY, LOVE, Characteristics of WOMEN, &c.

THE consideration of a greater evil is a sort of remedy against a lesser. Aristoppus had a farm burnt down; and when a Friend of his express'd a concern for him, he said, "I have three farms yet left, and thou hast but one in all"; and have more reason to lament thy misfortune, than thou mine."

If we will create imaginary wants to ourselves, why do we not create an imaginary satisfaction to them? It were the merrier frenzy of the two, to be like the Athenian, who fancied all the ships that came into the harbor were his own.—They are always impaired by affliction, who are not thereby improved.

Make use of time if you love eternity; know yesterday cannot be recalled, to-morrow cannot be assured. To-day is only yours, which if once lost is lost forever.

He who thinks no man above him but for his virtue, none below him but for his vice, can never be obsequious or assuming in a wrong place.

Many are the misfortunes of man's life, which he must either prevent by wisdom, or suffer with patience.

The liberality of nature in the person is frequently attended with a deficiency in understanding.

Love cannot long be concealed where it is, nor dissembled where it is not.

The plainer the dress, with greater lustre does beauty appear, Virtue is the greatest ornament, and good sense the best equipage.

'Tis always to be understood, that a Lady takes all you detract from the rest of her sex to be a gift to her.

A Lady who is tender of her reputation, would not be pleased to hear herself applauded for her great skill in singing and dancing. Ballust, speaking of Sempronia, a woman of great quality, but of a most abandon'd character, observes, that she sung and danc'd with more art and grace than became a virtuous woman.

There is nothing that wears out a fine face like the vigils of a card-table, and those cutting passions which naturally attend them. Haggard looks and pale complexion, are the natural indications of a Female Gamester.

The utmost of a woman's character is contained in domestic life; first her piety towards God; and next in the duties of a daughter, a wife, a mother and a sister.

A good wife (says Solomon) is a good portion: And there is nothing of so great worth as the mind well instructed.

Better is a portion in a wife, than with a wife.

Many of the misfortunes in families arise from the trifling way the women have in spending their time, and gratifying only their eyes and ears, instead of their reason and understanding.

A droll ANECDOTE of a COLONEL in the Army.

A Certain Colonel of a regiment used to keep an open table three times a week for the officers of his regiment, and they generally used to take it in turns. But he observed one young gentleman an Ensign, that never missed a day to dine with him. Surprised at this, he thought it encroaching upon his hospitality, and conceived a very indifferent opinion of the poor Ensign. On one of the public days he happened to go to the Colonel's tent earlier than any of the other guests, and was by that means entirely alone with the Colonel, who, displeased at his constancy, thought it was a good opportunity to give him a genteel hint. "Pray, Sir, said he to the Ensign, have you forgot your exercise?" "No Sir."—"Well then, said the Colonel, taking up a fusée, and going out of his tent, let us see how you can perform it." So giving him the piece, he gave the word of command. The young man performed very well. Now, said the Colonel, to the right about—March. Away marched the Ensign for about forty yards, and thinking he was going too far from the tent and the dinner, and not hearing the Colonel speak, stopped short, and told him, "That he had forgot a very material part of the exercise."—"What is that?" As you were, replied the Ensign. The Colonel laughed very heartily at the reproof; told the Ensign, that he was very right, and for his wit and humor should be obliged to him for his company every day.

A certain METHOD of destroying BUGS in a bedsted, &c..

PUT a handful of salt in 2 or 3 quarts of water, boil it and scald all the places where the bugs keep: Make use of this once every-year. This method has been tried several times by a man who is now 90 years of age, and he says it never fail'd of success.

For whom the task to trace the winding course
Of FREEDOM oozing from its crystal source.

Their ripen'd counsels into edicts shine,
And paint the Statesman through the whole design :
That each encircling State shou'd make its laws,
And raise its Heroes to support the cause ;
That SULLIVAN the Hampshire forces sway,
And THOMAS Massachusetts arms display ;
That from Rhode-Island GREEN should lead the Band,
While in Connecticut the joint command
Fell to a SPENCER's and a WORSTER's care ;
And those on Hudson to MONTGOMERY's share.
In former days with martial courage fill'd,
To wield the sword was GATES divinely skill'd ;
Important was his lot among the troops,
To give assistance and confirm their hopes.
Three being ordain'd, the general orders held
To regulate the conduct of the field :
A LEE, on enterprising scenes intent,
His genius pure, European his descent,
And prudent WARD, with the bold PUTNAM join'd,
Who to their Country all their care confin'd.
Conspicuous then o'er all their CHIEF was plac'd,
Whose various actions proper virtues grac'd,
And WASHINGTON adorn'd with private ease,
With all his riches and domestic peace,
Now left Virginia 'midst the rising States,
And first inhabited, as fame relates,
To lead a num'rous train against the hosts,
And gain fair Freedom, and restrain their boasts.
Along the western shore on Boston's Bay,
From different quarters join'd the forces lay :
Their Leaders now parade them on the field,
And all attentive to their mandates yield.
A part were posted on the rising ground,
That on the north o'erlooks the country round ;
While on the east a confin'd strait oppos'd,
And British troops beyond were well dispos'd :
And some were plac'd along on Cambridge Plain,
To watch their motions from the neighb'ring main ;
When on the south the rest assum'd their posts,
To guard around the stations of the hosts.
The work went on with emulated zeal,
And various movements for the public weal ;
Trenches were made and batt'ries rais'd along,
And every part with guards encompass'd strong.
The adverse troops possess'd their ground secure,

While thought remain'd but the decisive hour.
Gage and his leaders long their counsels weigh'd,
And order'd all his troops to be array'd,
Compos'd of heroes bold, a chosen band,
Were join'd with Howe, who had the chief command,
To force their way and gain a passage o'er,
To take the field upon the neighb'ring shore,
The valiant Chief intent on great designs,
Then steer'd his course to gain the land that joins
A little east to Bunker's rising ground,
And with his party hail'd the martial sound.
The sign was given with yonder host to cope,
When courage mix'd with their rising hope :
And now the time arriv'd to prove their right,
As dubious fate hung trembling on the fight.

In solemn pomp they all pursu'd their way
To gain the height where their opposers lay,
And cheerly now succeeded in their aim,
When the grim battle mix'd on the plain.
O'ergorged buds in thicken'd tempests fly
And noise of cannon echoes thro' the sky.
The hills attentive—then repeat the sounds,
And the blood gushes from a thousand wounds.
The Britons thrice retreat and thrice return,
And in th' attack with martial fury burn :
But not their art with all their courage join'd ;
Not all their grandeur curiously retain'd ;
Not Charleston's flame that spiring high arose ;
Nor all the smoke that aided to oppose ;
Could shake the firmness of COLUMBIA'S Band,
To yield submissive the adjacent land.

Heav'n poised the fight with equal balance long,
As 'twas with Greece in the Mæonian song.
Many the CHIEFS who left the realms of day,
And to the jaws of death resign'd a prey :
Among that number first a WARREN's lot,
WARREN the Hero, Statesman, Patriot :
Among the Britons, Pitcairn thar'd his fate,
Who wish'd for conquest 'till it was too late.

We've heard how storms from diff'rent parts engage,
And o'er the Caspian airy conflicts wage.
At first, the clouds in gentle order roll,
At length, the thunders ring from pole to pole :
Clouds mix with clouds, and storms with storms conspire
And lightnings brandish in the darken'd air ;
Until their mutual force had all decay'd,
When calm serene around the Heav'n's array'd.

Thus persever'd the troops, and thus engag'd, } [End of Book I.
And thus the heat of battle was assuag'd : } To be continued.]

Cambridge, Aug. 1782.

Mr. BICKERSTAFF is desired to insert what follows in his useful
ALMANACK for 1783, by doing which he will oblige his Friend
and Correspondent,

PUBLICOLA.

Extraß from a Philadelphia News-Paper, of July last.

Mr. CLAYPOLE,

You will do a kindness to the Public, by publishing the following simple Cure for that unhappy wasting disorder the CONSUMPTION ; which has been communicated by an inhabitant of South-Carolina, where it has proved successful in some very dangerous cases ; and has lately administered to the relief of several persons in this state.

TAKE of the bark of the small wild cherry tree, and of the low land beach tree (not button-wood) equal quantities, of which make a strong decoction ; give a pint thereof per day, in several portions, or more if the stomach will bear it ; and to render it more palatable, it may be mixed with a little weak toddy or tea, as may be most agreeable to the patient : And although a few days use of it may occasion sensible alterations for the better in the afflicted person, yet this course of drinking must be persisted in for at least three months to render the cure effectual.

IT is high-water at Salem, Marblehead, Cape-Ann, Ipswich, Newbury-port, &c. 20 minutes sooner than at Boston ; 2 hours and 26 minutes sooner at Tarpaulin-Cove, New-London and New-York ; three hours sooner at Rhode-Island and Amboy ; 3 hours sooner at Sandy-Hook ; 5½ hours sooner at Albany ; 3 hours later at Philadelphia ; half an hour later at New-Haven.

ONCE upon a time, a certain Rev. Dr. a man of great brawn and muscles, large, tall, termagant, happened to preach before King Charles II. being heated with his subject, and impatient of contradiction, even in the looks of an audience ; on a sudden he stripped up, and show'd the amaz'd congregation an huge, tremendous arm, with which he struck the cushion violently, and cry'd out, " And dare any body here deny this ?" The King thrunk back and mutter'd to himself, " No body in his senses, good Dr. within the reach of your tremendous arm !"

To Mrs. B* on her viewing a PRINTING-OFFICE,

BY PRINTING all the noblest arts
 Have been 'till now preserv'd with care ;
 This makes the Nymphs and Swains of parts
 Appear most charming and most fair :
 By this the names of Heroes great
 Who liv'd in happy days of yore,
 Are handed down to us in state,
 And shall be read forevermore :
 By this fair HELENA we know,
 And of her deeds and beauty hear,
 And this posterity shall show,
 How fair Mrs. B* doth now appear.
